The Group Project - ANALYZING Organizational Environment

Exercise Overview

As discussed during the classes, managers and organizations must be sensitive to a variety of environmental dimensions and forces reflected in the general, task, and internal environments. The macro (general) environment consists of economic, demographic, political, technological and sociocultural aspects. The internal environment contains organization's employees, board of members (where applicable), the culture. Moreover, each business has its task environment and that includes having particular stakeholders: customers, suppliers, partners, competitors, and regulators. Your task is to conduct and present your analysi of a chosen organization, which needs to comprise both quantitative and qualitative parts.

Imagine that you have to present the analysis to a person who knows nothing about the selected organization or its environment, and would like to know as much as possible 😊
